We are open and operational

Dear Customers and Partners,

The situation we face from coronavirus is changing fast and affecting all aspects of our everyday life. In these uncertain times, we want to reassure you that we remain open and operational.

The components we make are incorporated into the manufacturing processes of countless products around the world, which are essential to everyday life. Our products are used in many industries, including food processing for processes such as bread making and milk production. We also supply products for pharmaceutical production, including projects handling critical medical materials for hospitals that are vital for the treatment of COVID-19 patients. We understand the importance of the products we provide and are committed to mitigating any impacts to the supply chains and operations of our customers.

The safety of our employees and keeping the business operating as normal remains our primary focus. We have implemented a number of preventative measures throughout the business allowing us to maintain production, and current turnover levels remain normal. We have good stock levels of raw materials and finished goods, ensuring we are in a strong position to meet customer demands. All office functions are operating with a reasonably normal service, but with most people working from home. Please use email to your normal contacts to communicate with us. For new general sales and other enquires please email [\[email protected\]](#)

The Company has plans in place to keep the business running despite these incredibly testing times. We will keep you updated of any changes.

In the meantime, we wish you and your family good health and we look forward to getting back to normal when the situation has eased.

Kind Regards,

Peter Fanshawe
